He started to read the reviews and found that he had drunk the vermouth without ever noticing it. He ordered another and returned the pencil to the waiter. He was still reading the reviews when the girl came in bringing her heavy envelope of letters. "I didn't know they'd come," she said. "Let me see them. Please let me see them." The waiter brought her a venmouth and putting it down saw the picture as the girl unfolded a clipping. "C'est Monsieur?" he asked. "Yes it is," the girl said and held it up for him to see. "But differently dressed," the waiter said. "Do they write about the marriage? May I see a picture of Madame?" "Not about the marriage. Criticisms of a book by Monsieur."

"Magnificent," said the waiter who was deeply moved. "Is Madame also a writer?"

"No," the girl said not looking up from the clippings. "Madame is a housewife."The waiter laughed proudly. "Madame is probably in the cinema." They both read clippings and then the girl put the one she was reading down and said, "I'm frightened by them and all the things they say. How can we be us and have the things we have and do what we do and you be this that's in the clippings?" "I've had them before," the young man said. "They're bad for you but it doesn't last."
