"The hell with it." "All right. The hell with it, But we'll spend it and I think it's wonderful. You can V-rite afterwards. That way we can have the fun before I have a baby for one thing. How do I know when I'll have a baby even? Now it's all getting dull and dusty talking about it. Can't we just do it and not talk about it?" "What if I want to write? The minute you're not going to do something it will probably make you want to do it." "Then write, stupid. You didn't say you wouldn't write. Nobody said anything about worrying if you wrote. Did they?"

But somewhere something had been said and now he could not remember it because he had been thinking ahead. "If you want to write go ahead and I'll amuse myself. I don't have to leave you when you write do I?" "But there would you like us to go now when people begin to come here?" "Anywhere you want to go. Will you do it, David?" "For how long?" "For as long as we want. Six months. Nine months. A year." "All right," he said, "Really,?" "Sure." "You're awfully good. If I didn't love you for anything else I'd love you for decisions." "They're easy to make when you haven't seen how too many of them can turn out," "He drank the hero drink but it did not taste so good and he ordered a fresh bottle of cold Perrier and made a short drink without ice. "Make me one please. Short like yours. And then let's let it start and have lunch."
